

Plymouth Involvement and Participation Service (PIPS) has been nominated for a Big Society Award for all the work it has put in over the past two years. This is an award judged by the Prime Ministers Office and we should hear an outcome from Downing Street in December ...just in time for Christmas!!!!

Plymouth Involvement and Participation Service (PIPS) is as busy as ever and the volunteers have been tirelessly consulting on various areas of mental wellbeing. They have begun to distribute a new PIPS survey which focuses on improving service user and carer involvement within local mental health services. PIPS is working in partnership with the Plymouth LINK mental health task group to improve services and will work together on the results of this survey.

PIPS service users and carers are also involved in Quality Innovation Productivity Prevention (QIPP) and are consulting with commissioners and sentinel the GP consortium.

If you have any experiences of mental health services that you would like to share with PIPS we would like to hear your views, ideas and experiences so we can express these views to the service commissioners and providers to improve PIPS then please contact Ashley Daw on 202407 or by email on adaw@colebrookhousing.co.uk
